Capitalism, Colonialism, and Crises: The Remaking of Modern Canada 1960–2025

A New History for the Twenty-First Century Volume Three

By (author) Bryan D. Palmer

Apr 07, 2026 | Hardcover, Paper over boards | $39.95 |

A new history of Canada for twenty-first century

In this third volume, Bryan Palmer continues his sweeping new history of Canada, interweaving the latest research in labour, political, economic and social history. This book covers the profound economic and social changes Canadians have navigated since 1960, including Quebec nationalism, student and labour protests, Indigenous land battles, and the feminist, LGBTQ+ and environmental movements. It concludes with a reflection on the post-Trump global order and Canadian society today.

Canada experienced extraordinary growth and reform in this period along with increased opportunities that became possible for many. But these developments took place along with the continuing dispossession of Indigenous peoples and deepening inequality and social injustice for the majority of Canadians, particularly after the 1990s. Yet in the various anticapitalist and anticolonial resistance movements of this era, Palmer points to a possible path forward to a better society and future.

Building on the work of scholars who have produced a vast academic literature on a wide range of topics in Canadian history, Capitalism, Colonialism, and Crises: The Remaking of Modern Canada 1960–2025 concludes a compelling new history of Canada that reflects the knowledge and values of twenty-first-century Canadians.

Contributor Bio

BRYAN D. PALMER is Professor Emeritus and former Canada Research Chair, Canadian Studies, Trent University, Peterborough, Canada. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, former editor of Labour/Le Travail, and has published extensively on the history of labour and the revolutionary left. Among his many books are Canada's 1960s and the co-authored Toronto's Poor: A Rebellious History. In the fall of 2024, Colonialism and Capitalism: Canada's Origins 1500–1890 was published, followed by Capitalism and Colonialism: The Making of Modern Canada 1890–1960 in the spring of 2025. He lives in Warkworth, Ontario.

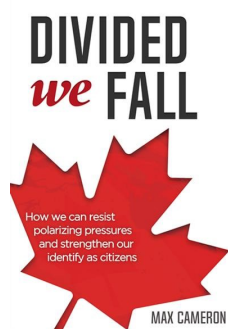

Reviews

"Bryan D. Palmer has done something no else has done, not even Bryan Palmer. He has written a serious, sustained, and accessible account of colonialism and capitalism. It is a history of Canada that is also the story of creative resistance on the part of Indigenous Peoples, workers, Québécois, and others.

"Like the juggler who has three bowling balls and a chainsaw in the air while riding a bicycle, Palmer keeps his themes, subjects, and dramatis personae moving, yet always visible for the reader, never dropping them and explaining change over time. Reading these books, like watching a juggler, I was in awe. You will be too."

- Donald Wright, President Canadian Historical Association, University of New Brunswick

"An historian with a deeply penetrating view of Canada's past, present, and future. Capitalism, Colonialism, and Crises: The Remaking of Modern Canada 1960–2025 is a masterpiece."

Divided We Fall*How we can resist polarizing pressures and strengthen our identity as citizens*By (author) Max Cameron

Apr 07, 2026 | Paperback, Trade | $27.95 |

A timely look at how Canadians can end toxic discourse, restore a sense of common purpose and safeguard our country.

The forces sowing division and polarization are growing in Canada, threatening to tear apart our social, political and economic fabric. Rising inequality, regional discontent, and growing distrust of democratic institutions are fuelling populist rhetoric and the spread of misinformation, especially on social media, while deepening divisions within our political landscape.

In the face of existential threats not seen since the time of Confederation, in Divided We Fall Max Cameron looks at the forces, both internal and external, that threaten Canadian unity. Based on his experience working with Canadians of diverse points of view who are considering a role in public life, he offers proposals for how Canadians can rebuild civil discourse based on our common citizenship, and restore a shared sense of purpose at a vital point in our country's history.

The Bains

Peril at Hell's Gate

By (author) Bill Freeman

Apr 07, 2026 | Paperback, Trade | $19.95 |

An unforgettable historical adventure set in the rugged mountains of BC during the building of the railroad.

Set in the 19th century against the rugged backdrop of the British Columbia Rockies and the building of Canada's first transcontinental railway, teen siblings Kate and Robbie lead pack horses across treacherous mountain terrain to deliver supplies to workers building the transcontinental railroad. Along the way, they befriend Lee, a young Chinese labourer with his own secret reasons for working to build the railway.

The adventure takes a dramatic turn when Kate must disguise herself as a boy to stay at the railroad camp. While maintaining this secret, the teens are drawn into a daring mission to steer a supply barge through the dangerous Hell's Gate rapids, a critical step in completing the railroad.

This gripping tale of courage and survival is based on a true but little-known story from Canada's past.

Last Stand

By (author) David Starr

Apr 07, 2026 | Paperback, Trade | $19.95 |

A teen environmental activist makes decisions about her future as she takes part in a BC pipeline protest.

In Last Stand, teen environmental activist Bella decides to take part in a pipeline protest in northern BC. But once she arrives, Bella realizes the situation is more complicated than she imagined, as she crosses paths with long-time activists, militant university students, protesters from across the country, and local residents, all with their own experiences and perspectives. This includes Maggie, an Indigenous hereditary chief and veteran of environmental battles, who helps Bella understand the issues at stake.

When the courts rule in favour of the pipeline company, Bella and her fellow protesters clash with the police and arrests follow. Bella must make decisions about activism and her future.

Based on real-life events, Last Stand explores the issue of pipeline development, the role of social media in activism and the personal sacrifices required to follow your convictions.

Between ClassesBy (author) Angelot Ndongmo

Apr 07, 2026 | Paperback, Trade | $19.95 |

Conflicts of class and status for a teen from Jamaica, newly arrived and finding himself in an elite Toronto high school where he meets the girl of his dreams.

When 18-year-old Derell moves from Jamaica to Toronto to live with his father, he leaves behind his girlfriend and sick mother and steps into a world he doesn't recognize. At his new and very elite high school, Derell meets Amina, a gifted dancer, and the two click.

But Amina is caught between her heart and her family's demands to date within their wealthy circle. That circle includes Malik, a flashy aspiring rapper who sees Derell as competition both in music and in love. Balancing the pressure of fitting in, clashes with Malik, and his father's new family, Derell has to decide whether or not to try to join in with the world of Amina's family and friends, all obsessed with money and status.

This is a story that reflects the tensions within the Jamaican Canadian community where barriers of social class and status play out among both teens and adults.

Finding Family

1st edition

By (author) Kamilah Haywood

Apr 07, 2026 | Paperback, Trade | $19.95 |

Sometimes family is those you choose.

In Finding Family, eighteen-year-old Jamaican-Canadian Trey leaves behind a life of rejection in the suburbs and finds a new community in Toronto's Gay Village. As he navigates the complexities of queer identity, romance, and self-discovery, Trey learns that family isn't always defined by blood, but by those who choose to accept and support you.

This debut novel from Kamilah Haywood offers an authentic portrayal of Toronto's LGBTQ+ scene.

Contributor Bio

KAMILAH HAYWOOD (aka Kwoodz) is a queer Black Canadian fiction author of Jamaican heritage who writes books depicting the unfiltered, authentic, occasionally dark side of Toronto life. Through raw details and intimate narratives, they have captured issues including female incarceration, sex trafficking, relationships, coming of age, and spirituality in their intensely gripping novels.

As an active artist, activist and facilitator, they are also part of their purpose! They are co-founder of the International Writers' Workshop and the Find Your Voice and Warrior Women Winning workshops with the Toronto Urban Book Expo. They are also an advisory committee member of the Canadian Coalition for Children with Incarcerated Parents with the University of Ottawa and advisory council member of the Prison Transparency Project with the University of Carleton. Toronto

An Illustrated History of Its First 13,000 Years - New Edition

Edited by Ron Williamson

Apr 07, 2026 | Paperback, Trade | $29.95 |

A trip through Toronto's 13,000-year past, with stunning illustrations and fascinating historical perspectives.

Telling Toronto's story from the final retreat of the Laurentide Ice Sheet to today's metropolis, a team of historians brings together beautiful illustrations and fresh perspectives in this short history.

Peter Carruthers introduces Toronto as a middle ground: geographically a meeting point between Canada's vast natural resource wilderness, and the sprawling continental Midwest. Since prehistory the city's site has been a place of meditation and exchange between different cultures and peoples.

Robert MacDonald takes us back 12,500 years with an exploration of the geological and ecological history of the area's ancient landscape.

Ronald F. Williamson presents the archaeological record of the lives of the aboriginal people who made seasonal camps and villages along the river valleys and lakeshore.

Carl Benn describes the colonial transformation of York during the 1700s, and its growth into the most important urban, institutional, cultural and commercial centre in Upper Canada during the early 19th century.

Christopher Andreae presents the city's age of industry, a century of technological and industrial growth that laid the foundations for today's city.

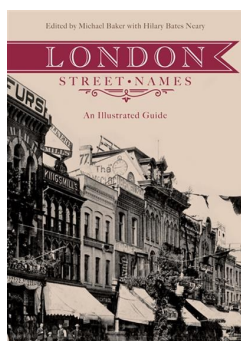

Roger Hall brings Toronto into the twenty-first century, analyzing the forces that transformed Toronto into a vigorous, multicultural metropolitan centre that continues to re-invent itself.

In this regional how-to guide, East Coasters will find all the inspiration and information they need to create a garden or yard that features native plants and pollinators. It includes dozens of simple DIY projects and activities that will attract butterflies, birds, bees, wildflowers and other species and help them flourish.

JEFFREY C. DOMM's detailed illustrations and photographs provide easy to follow, step-by-step instructions and show the beautiful results they yield. This book identifies the best native wildflowers, shrubs and trees to plant. With projects for every season, Jeff Domm offers ways to enhance gardens and yards for every season of the year.

Featuring how to:

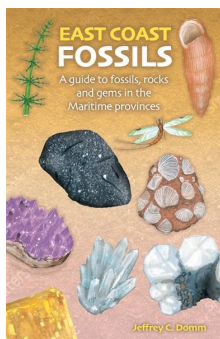

- Turn a lawn into a thriving wildflower meadow
- Make simple homes and feeders for butterflies, hummingbirds, chickadees and more
- Grow birdseed to support animals through the winter months
- Protect salt- and freshwater shorelines against erosion

This book is for gardening in the Maritime provinces, with the soil conditions, climate and growing season of the Maritimes always in mind.
